The story girl said that once upon a time Felix and I on the May morning when we left Toronto for Prince Edward Island had not then heard her say it and indeed were but barely aware of the existence of such a person as the story girl we did not know her at all under that name we knew only that a cousin Sara Stanley whose mother our Aunt Felicity was dead was living down on the island with Uncle Roger and Aunt Olivia King on a farm adjoining the old King Homestead in Carlisle we supposed we should get acquainted with her when we reached there and we had an idea from Aunt Olivia’s letters to father that she would be quite a jolly creature further than that we did not think about her we were more interested in Felicity and Cecily and Dan who lived on the homestead and would therefore be our roommates for a season.

Community on Prince Edward Island Canada in 1917 Montgomery opined that the Story Girl was her favorite of the novels she had written by that time. The book is narrated by Beverley who together with his brother Felix has come to live with his Aunt Janet and Uncle Alec King on their farm while their father travels for business. They spend their leisure time with their cousins Dan, Felicity and Cecily King hired boy Peter Craig, neighbor Sara Ray and another cousin Sara Stanley. The latter is the Story Girl of the title and she entertains the group with fascinating tales including various events in the King family history. The book is actually two stories; those of Beverley King and his friends and the tales told by the Story Girl. Montgomery had grown up in a Scottish Canadian family where stories, legends, and myths from Scotland were often told and she drew upon this background in creating the character of Stanley who excels at the telling of tales. The Canadian scholar Elizabeth Waterson noted at the book begins with the Story Girl winning the ultimate accolade in the eyes of the Scottish community when her facility at telling an old story squeezes a five dollar donation out of an old curmudgeon Stanley. In her first scene, she stands gay and graceful and promises she can tell some witch stories that will freeze the blood in your veins unlike Montgomery's better known character Anne Shirley whose wild improbable stories are clearly those of a child while her later stories are those of a young adult. The Story Girl is at the age of 14 an accomplished story teller whose achievements are beyond her age. The character of Peter Craig bears a strong resemblance to Herman Leard, the great love of Montgomery's life. The man she wished she had married but did not. Sara, the Story Girl wins the love of Peter and bests her more pretty rival Felicity for his affections not through her looks but rather because of her sense of humor, her ability to see what others cannot and a mystical sense of the beauty of the world. Montgomery wrote about the difference between the two; her face was like a rose of youth but when the Story Girl spoke we forgot to look at Felicity. The Story Girl has a somewhat dreamy quality not only to her stories but herself as she says I'd like a dress of moonshine with stars for buttons.

Lucy Maud Montgomery Short Stories, 1909 to 1922

2014-06-03 from national magazine volume 35 on every page of the story girl, the touch of the finished artist is apparent; there is a smoothness of style, a finesse that places Miss Montgomery in the first rank of contemporary writers. Child life is mirrored in such a charming manner that the reader is unconsciously carried back to the happy carefree days of his own childhood. The story girl was gifted with a captivating voice; a voice that possessed the happy faculty of making her listeners live through with her the varied scenes in the story she was telling. In her inimitable style, the author has made her heroine's character so real that one joins heart and soul in the work and play of the happy group at Carlisle, a picturesque valley of Prince Edward Island. Twenty-four miles from a railroad is the scene of the story, but the story girl's tales of the Milky Way, the wedding veil of the proud princess, the tale of the rainbow, and how kissing was discovered are told in such a delightful manner that one becomes oblivious to environment and breathes in the sweet perfume of the blossoming trees in Uncle Alec's fascinating old orchard. One cannot read of Felicity, Cecily, Sara, Dan, Felix, Beverly, and Peter without feeling that the young mind has its seeming tragedies and the author's sympathetic knowledge of human nature and charm of description act like a tonic on a wearied mind.

Looking for Anne of Green Gables 2008-07-08 when the editor of Everywoman's World asked me to write the story of my career, I smiled with a little touch of incredulous amusement. My career? I had no career. Was not a career be something splendid, wonderful, spectacular at the very least something varied and exciting? Could my long uphill struggle through many quiet, uneventful years be termed a career? It had never occurred to me to call it so, and on first thought it did not seem to me that there was much to be said about that same long monotonous struggle. But it appeared to be a whim of the aforesaid editor that I should say what little there was to be said and in those same long years I acquired the habit of accommodating myself to the whims of editors to such an inveterate degree that I have not yet been able to shake it off. So I shall cheerfully tell my tame story if it does nothing else, it may serve to encourage some other toiler who is struggling along in the weary pathway I once followed to success.

Freedom Walkers 2006. Once upon a time we all walked on the golden road. It was a fair highway through the land of lost delight. Shadow and sunshine were blessedly mingled, and every turn and dip revealed a fresh charm and a new loveliness to eager hearts and unspoiled eyes. On that road we heard the song of morning stars, we drank in fragrances aerial and sweet as a may mist, we were rich in gossamer fancies and iris hopes. Our hearts sought and found the boon of dreams. The years waited beyond and they were very fair. Life was a rose-lipped comrade with purple flowers dripping from her fingers. We may long have left the golden road behind, but its memories are the dearest of our eternal possessions, and those who cherish them as such may haply find a pleasure in the pages of this book whose people are pilgrims on the golden road of youth.
