the national academy of construction nac has determined that disputes and their accompanying inefficiencies and costs constitute a significant problem for the industry in 2002 the nac assessed the industry’s progress in attacking this problem and determined that although the tools techniques and processes for preventing and efficiently resolving disputes are already in place they are not being widely used in 2003 the nac helped to persuade the center for construction industry studies ccis at the university of texas and the alfred p sloan foundation to finance and conduct empirical research to develop accurate information about the relative transaction costs of various forms of dispute resolution in 2004 the nac teamed with the federal facilities council ffc of the national research council to sponsor the government industry forum on reducing construction costs uses of best dispute resolution practices by project owners the forum was held on september 23 2004 at the national academy of sciences in washington d c speakers and panelists at the forum addressed several topics reducing construction costs addresses topics such as the root causes of disputes and the impact of disputes on project costs and the economics of the construction industry a second topic addressed was dispute resolution tools and techniques for preventing managing and resolving construction related disputes this report documents examples of successful uses of dispute resolution tools and techniques on some high profile projects and also provides ways to encourage greater use of dispute resolution tools throughout the industry. This report addresses steps that owners of construction projects who have the greatest ability to influence how their projects are conducted should take in order to make their projects more successful.

Bear Creek Dam Leakage Resolution Project 2007

Conflict resolution of the Boruca hydro energy project is a case study that aims to profile best practices for sustainable development, indigenous human rights, and conflict resolution. In 2003, a joint project was developed between the United Nations University of Peace and the international peace and conflict resolution program at Arcadia University to study the Boruca hydroelectric conflict in Costa Rica. The aim was to bring together theory and practice and to reveal the link between peace and conflict resolution and sustainable development through partnerships with the Kan Tan Ecologic.

Annotation people are the backbone of projects and the most important resource in a project to survive and grow in the twenty-first century. Project managers must learn and use appropriate human skills to motivate and inspire all those involved in the project. This book offers practical guidelines that can be used to develop and implement the human skills appropriate to project management: communication, motivation, negotiation, conflict resolution, conflict and stress management, and leadership. This book is volume two of the Human Aspects of Project Leadership series.

Workplace Dispute Resolution Project 1996

This book is about the EU's role in conflict resolution and reconciliation in Europe ever since it was implemented as a political project of the post World War II reality in Western Europe. European integration has been credited with performing conflict resolution functions it allegedly transformed the long-standing adversarial relationship between France and Germany into a strategic partnership. Conflict in Western Europe became obsolete. The end of the Cold War further reinforced its role as a regional peace project. While these evolutionary dynamics are uncontested, the deeper meaning of the process - its transformative power - is still to be elucidated. How does European integration restore peace when its equilibrium is broken, and conflict or the legacies of enmity persist? This book sets out to do exactly that. It explores the peace and conflict resolution role of European integration by testing its somewhat vague albeit well-established macro political rationale of a peace project in the practical settings of conflicts. The analytical lens of that of Europeanization - the central argument of the book - is that the evolution of the policy mix resources framing influences and political opportunities through which European integration affects conflicts and processes of conflict resolution demonstrates a historical trend through which the EU has become an indispensable factor of conflict resolution. It begins with the pooling together of policy making at the European level for the management of particular sectors - early integration in the European Coal and Steel Community through the functioning of core EU policies - Northern Ireland to the challenges of enlargement - Cyprus and the European perspective for the Western Balkans - Kosovo. The book will be of value to academics and non-expert observers alike with an interest in European integration and peace studies.
