in works of silver and wool the navajos have established a unique brand of american craft and when their artisans were integrated into the american economy during the late nineteenth century they became part of a complex cultural and economic framework in which their handmade crafts conveyed meanings beyond simple adornment as anglo tourists discovered these crafts the navajo weavings and jewelry gained appeal from the romanticized notion that their producers were part of a primitive group whose traditions were destined to vanish erika bsumek now explores the complex links between indian identity and the emergence of tourism in the southwest to reveal how production distribution and consumption became interdependent concepts shaped by the forces of consumerism race relations and federal policy bsumek unravels the layers of meaning that surround the branding of indian made when navajo artisans produced their goods collaborating traders tourist industry personnel and even ethnologists created a vision of navajo culture that had little to do with navajos themselves and as anglos consumed navajo crafts they also consumed the romantic notion of navajos as primitives perpetuated by the marketplace these processes of production and consumption reinforced each other creating a symbiotic relationship and influencing both mutual anglo navajo perceptions and the ways in which navajos participated in the modern marketplace examining varied sites of production artisans workshops museums trading posts bsumek shows how the market economy perpetuated navaho stereotypes and cultural assumptions she takes readers into the hogans where men worked silver and women wove rugs and into the outlets where middlemen dictated what buyers wanted and where navajos influenced inventory exploring this process over seven decades she describes how artisans increasing use of modern tools created controversy about authenticity and how the meaning of the indian made label was even challenged in court ultimately bsumek shows that the sale of indian made goods cannot be explained solely through supply and demand it must also reckon with the multiple images and narratives that grew up around the goods themselves integrating consumer culture tourism and history to open new perspectives on our understanding of american indian material culture this book focusses on the role of craft as a continuing cultural practice and the revival of disappearing skills in contemporary society. It includes twenty-five essays by highly regarded artisans, academics, technologists, entrepreneurs, businesspeople, curators, and researchers from many countries representing a wide range of global craft traditions and innovations. The authors explain their professional practices and creative pathways with knowledge, experience, and passion. They offer insightful analyses of their traditions within their culture and in the marketplace alongside the evolution of technology as it adapts to support experimentation and business strategies they write about teaching and research informing their practice and they explain the importance of their tools and materials in function and form of the objects they make. The essays reveal a poignant expression of their successes, disappointments, and opportunities. This book offers case studies of how artisans have harnessed the traditions of the past alongside the latest design technologies. The authors reveal how global craft is not only a vehicle for self-expression and creativity but also for being deeply relevant to the world of work, community, and environmental sustainability. The book makes the vital link between skills, knowledge, education, and employment and fills a much-needed niche in technical vocational education and training (TVET).
