This book provides a comprehensive overview of the biosimilar regulatory framework, the development process, and clinical aspects for development of biosimilars. The development path of a biosimilar is just as unique as a development path of a new drug tailored by the mechanism of action, the quality of the molecule published information on the reference product, the current competitive environment, the target market, and regulatory guidance and most importantly, the emerging totality of evidence for the proposed biosimilar during development.

For the ease of readers, the book comprises of six sections as follows:

Section I: Business, Health, Economics, and Intellectual Property Landscape for Biosimilars
Section II: Regulatory Aspects of Development and Approval for Biosimilars
Section III: Biopharmaceutical Development and Manufacturing of Biosimilars
Section IV: Analytical Similarity Considerations for Biosimilars
Section V: Clinical Aspects of Biosimilar Development
Section VI: Biosimilars Global Development and Clinical Experience

Chapters have been written by one or more experts from academia, industry, or regulatory agencies who have been involved with one or more aspects of biosimilar product development. The authors and editors have an expertise in commercialization and pricing of biosimilars, intellectual property considerations, chemistry, manufacturing controls, CMC, and analytical development for biosimilars, regulatory and clinical aspects of biosimilar development.

Besides the industry practitioners, the book includes several contributions from regulators across the globe. First published in 1993, Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis, an Informa company. This book presents the state of the art of research and development of computational reflection in the context of software engineering. Reflection has attracted considerable attention recently in software engineering, particularly from object-oriented researchers and professionals. The properties of transparency, separation of concerns, and extensibility supported by reflection have largely been accepted as useful in software development and design. Reflective features have been included in successful software development technologies such as the Java language. The book offers revised versions of papers presented first at a workshop held during OOPSLA 99 together with especially solicited contributions. The papers are organized in topical sections on reflective and software engineering foundations, reflective software adaptability, and evolution, reflective middleware engineering, Java-based reflective languages, and dynamic reconfiguration through reflection.

of this volume collectively demonstrate the importance of critical service learning in this historic moment as we participate in and witness ongoing struggles for justice around the world. The contributors of this volume offer guidance to educators and scholars alike who are interested in designing, participating in, and studying the potential of alliances formed through critical service learning. The volume emphasizes theoretical and historical foundations of critical service learning, pressing questions facing the field, exploration of outcomes of and ongoing challenges for the pedagogy and design features, and larger scale models of critical service learning that can be implemented across the educational landscape of elementary, secondary, and higher education. Endorsements of this volume in the Advances in Service Learning Research Series do not disappoint. Emily Nemeth and Ashley Patterson have amassed an amazing team of authors who take readers on a rewarding journey across diverse cultural communities and educational contexts, revealing the limitations of traditional service learning approaches in addressing issues of racial injustice. Readers of this volume will gain a greater understanding of the rapidly evolving and maturing nature of higher education service learning pedagogy and the need to adopt more critical perspectives in the study and practice of service learning.

Andrew Furco, University of Minnesota, Pursuit of Liberation, conceived and written during tumultuous times in the United States, offers hope for the possibility of social justice and liberation in educational spaces. The modern day brutal lynching of George Floyd, an African American man by a white police officer, and the COVID-19 pandemic revealed the horridness and inhumanity of a country that advertises itself as a beacon of equity and inclusion. This volume is a reminder that social justice and liberation require vigilance. The editors, professors Nemeth and Patterson, persuade us to understand that the work of inclusion and liberation in education is complex, multidisciplinary, continuous, and iterative. Most importantly, they convincingly assert that communities and educational institutions need to take bold steps toward a more just, hopeful, and loving world through critical service learning.

Shirley Mthethwa Sommers, University of Mpumalanga, critical reflection helps professionals to learn directly from their practice experience so that they can improve their own work in an ongoing and flexible way. Something essential in today’s complex and changing organizations, it allows change to be managed in a way that enables individuals to preserve a sense of what is fundamentally important to them as professionals. It is particularly important as it can also help make sense of some fundamental issues and so also has implications for how we live our lives. However, more systematic research on critical reflection is needed to help us understand what works best for professionals in different settings.

Abstract: This is an abstract on self-development while deploying some of the models in reflective writing. We learn by experiences which allow us to absorb what we read, hear, and feel, and help to do the activity and mainly interact with the people which help us to socialize. Reflection is a thinking of an extended period which are interlinked with the recent experience. It also involves commonalities, differences, and interrelation beyond their superficial elements. Reflection is a form of problem solving that chained several ideas together by linking with its predecessor in order to resolve the issues which are raised.

Theological Reflection and Education for Ministry 2016-02-17

A major and continuing problem for theological education and the practice of Christian ministry is how to best achieve a genuine integration between theory and practice. Theology and experience. The key claim of this book is that theological reflection beginning with experience is a method of integration and that pastoral supervision is a vehicle for theological reflection. In establishing this claim, John Paver demonstrates that the model and method have potential to be a catalyst for reform within theological colleges and seminaries. Three different theological reflection models are developed and critiqued in this book, and their capacity to be developed in particular contexts is explored. This book does not stop at ministry cultural and personal integration but is bold enough to make recommendations for structural integration within the theological institution.

The Course Reflection Project 2015-05-01

Service learning is entering a post-initiatory phase at tertiary institutions of all types and sizes. Service learning programs are common, and service learning requirements for graduation are growing in popularity. Taken together alongside continued faculty interest in effective teaching, these factors have raised the visibility and popularity of service learning. Now, the greater need in service learning is not to prove the need for or efficacy of service learning but to turn the focus squarely back on practice. Following established best practice is not enough; instructors also need to reflect on how this fits within the specific context and application of each unique course and service learning partnership. While there are many excellent resources that detail best practice and showcase exemplary service learning courses, faculty reflection and course revision often goes unmentioned in response to the lack of attention on the role of reflection and course revision. We convened groups of faculty from a variety of disciplines to reflect deeply on their courses, paying specific attention to obstacles and challenges. These conversations were converted to articles for this edited collection, each chapter representing the process of reflection and revision and serving as a guide to develop effective practice in varied curricular contexts. This text contributes to the body of literature on service learning in a unique and practical manner. Faculty teaching or interested in teaching service learning classes would benefit from this text as well as university administrators and community service directors involved in service learning at a programmatic and institutional level. This book should be marketed to faculty teaching disciplinary service learning classes and service learning pedagogy classes and administrative offices.

Reflection Paper on the Social Dimension of Europe 2015-10-23

This book is a collection of refereed invited papers on the history of computing in education from the 1970s to the mid 1990s, presenting a social history of the introduction and early use of computers in schools. The 30 papers deal with the introduction of computers in schools in many countries around the world: Norway, South Africa, UK, Canada, Australia, USA, Finland, Chile, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Spain, Ireland, Israel, and Poland. The authors are not professional historians but rather people who as teachers, students, or researchers were involved in this history and they narrate their experiences from a personal perspective, offering fascinating stories.

The Reflective Practice Guide 1999

Reflection in writing studies is now entering a third generation dating from the 1970s. The first generation of reflection focused on identifying and describing internal cognitive processes assumed to be part of composing. The second generation, operating in both classroom and assessment scenes in the 1990s, developed mechanisms for externalizing reflection making it visible and thus explicitly available to help writers. Now, a third generation of work in reflection is emerging as mapped by the contributors to a rhetoric of reflection. This iteration of research and practice is taking up new questions in new sites of activity and with new theories: it comprises attention to transfer of writing knowledge and practice, teaching and assessment portfolios, linguistic and cultural difference, and various media including print and digital. It conceptualizes conversation as a primary reflective medium both inside and outside the classroom and for individuals and collectives. It articulates the role that different genres play in hosting reflection. Perhaps most important in the work of this third generation is the identification and increasing appreciation of the epistemic value of reflection of its ability to help make new meanings and of its rhetorical power for both scholars and students. this book gives a complex description and discussion of today's populist attacks against the European Union (EU) following the financial crisis of 2008 which opened the floodgates of dissatisfaction and the migration crisis, which destabilized the traditional solidarity basis of the EU. The problem of Brexit is also explored. Each chapter presents one of the main elements of the crisis of the EU; these include Western European populism, Central European right-wing populism in power, and the exploitation of the EU's mistake during the migration crisis of the mid-2010s. These also include the discovery of Christian ideology against immigration and hidden anti-Semitic propaganda using a hysterical attack against the liberal billionaire philanthropist George Soros and Brexit. There is a detailed discussion of the failures of the EU to pacify the neighbourhood in the south and north, especially in Ukraine, and the rising hostile outside enemies of the EU, including Russia and Turkey. Bad relationships with Trump's America, the uncertainty of NATO, and the emergence of a new rival, China, that enters into the central European edge of the EU. The author explores strategies for coping with and emerging from this existential crisis and ends with the alternative plans and possibilities for the future of the eurozone. This will be an invaluable resource for understanding the crisis of the EU, one of the central questions of contemporary international politics for undergraduate and graduate students and readers interested in the discussion surrounding an endangered European integration and difficult world politics.

to naturalists there is no such thing as complete justification for any claim and so requiring complete warrant for naturalist proposals is an unreasonable request. The proper guideline for naturalist proposals seems thus clear: develop it using the methods of science if this leads to a fruitful stance then explicate and reassess the resulting offer will exhibit virtuous circularity if its explanatory feedback loop involves critical reassessment as the explanations it encompasses play out so viewed, naturalism is a philosophical perspective that seeks to unite in a virtuous circle the natural sciences and non-foundationalist broadly based empiricism. Other common lines of antinaturalist complaint are that naturalization efforts seem fruitful only in some areas also that several endeavors outside the sciences serve as sources of knowledge into human life and the human condition, especially in areas where science does not reach terribly far as yet it seems hard not to grant some truth to many allegories from literature, art, and some religions. Naturalism has room for knowledge gathered outside science provided the imported claims satisfy also by naturalistic methods naturalism and the debate about its scope and limits thrive on discrepancy we hope that collectively the selected essays that follow will give a fair view of the vitality and tribulations of naturalism as a variegated contemporary philosophical perspective
