The author opens his discussion by considering the remote and pictographic origins of words fundamental in scientific discourse and then sets forth the influential doctrines of the two forces and the five elements subsequently he writes of the important sceptical tradition the effects of Buddhist thought and the Neo-Confucian climax of Chinese naturalism last comes a discussion of the conception of laws of nature in China and the West.

Three years ago, Lin Qing went to prison full of hatred and coincidentally obtained the ancient teachings of the God of Agriculture. When he returned, he was already proficient in peerless medical skills and also had mysterious and wondrous techniques in his possession. Using modern knowledge to shed light on ancient techniques, this text examines two of the earliest therapeutic techniques of Chinese medicine: acupuncture and moxibustion.

Acupuncture is the implantation of very thin needles into subcutaneous connective tissue and muscle at a great number of different points on the body's surface. Moxibustion is the burning of Artemisia tinder moxa either directly on the skin or just above it. For 2500 years, the Chinese have used both techniques to relieve pain and to heal a wide variety of illnesses and malfunctions.

A full historical account of acupuncture and moxibustion in the theoretical structure of Chinese medicine. Doctors Lu and Needham combine it with a rationale of the two techniques in the light of modern scientific knowledge.

Zhou Lujing, a professional writer living in a bustling commercial town in southeastern China, published a series of lavishly illustrated books which constituted the first multigenre painting manuals in Chinese history. Their popularity was immediate and their contents and format were widely reprinted and disseminated in a number of contemporary publications focusing on Zhou's work. Art by the Book describes how such publications accommodated the cultural taste and demands of the general public and shows how painting manuals functioned as a form in which everything from icons of popular culture to graphic or literary clichés was presented to both gratify and shape the sensibilities of a growing reading public as a special commodity of early modern China when cultural standing was measured by a person's command of literati taste and lore. Painting manuals provided nonelite readers with a device for enhancing social capital.
